The striking thing, moreover, was not their number but their demeanor. I have never seen anything like it, and it was everywhere the same. The day was lovely, a perfect autumn afternoon, windless and cloudless; one could see every face and note every expression. The people not only stood in perfect order and in silence, but they wore a look of gravity and reverence I have never seen in a crowd before. There were thousands of the roughest working men; there for hours, but I saw none of them even smoking. I saw no one talking and laughing, but scores of women crying. There was hardly more sign of curiosity than of sympathy in their faces. In point of fact, there was nothing for them to see. They had come to honour the dead, and never were dead more truly honoured. To see the place all so grave and still along that extended line produced an indescribable impression. No man can laugh at the dead, but dead who can move a multitude in this way are few indeed, and behind the people of Hull one felt the nation was standing, for these are England's dead.

As the cemetery was approached the crowd grew more and more dense. Outside the gates the band and the others on foot stopped to let the hearse and carriage go by. The band had been playing the "Dead March, Handel's great 'Dead March,' the most majestic because the simplest of all dead marches, and the coffin passed slowly on between the dense and silent rows of spectators. It was infinitely moving. I saw the tears come into the eyes of many a man. The sun was getting low by this time and shone on the scene with the waning light of an autumn day dying in mist. The coffins were placed in the chapel, the mourners filing in, and Captain White, a veteran fisherman, now of the fishermen's mission, read the burial service according to Non-conformist usage. The coffin was then borne to the two graves and the service was completed. Captain Smith leaves a widow and four sons, three of whom are little boys. William Leggett leaves a mother and sister.

MAIL STEAMER DEPARTURES.

The following table is a chronologically arranged list of mail steamer sailings to Europe, America, Canada, and Australia. Coast ports, Manila, and Japan are not given, for steamers are constantly sailing for those ports. All the American steamers call at Japan, and the majority of the Australian boats call at Manila, and, in addition to those vessels, special steamers run there. The departure of every steamer is subject to alteration. The P. & O. mails usually reach London in about 28 days, and the French and German in about 28 or 30 days.

HONGKONG, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1904.

THE MIND OF JAPAN.

FIFTEEN years ago, a competent and impartial observer, Professor Dixon, of Tokio, wrote thus of the Japanese character: 'The Japanese have many excellent qualities: they are kindly, courteous, law-abiding, cleanly in their habits, frugal, and possessed with a high sense of personal honour which makes sordidness unknown. This is associated, moreover, with an ardent patriotic spirit, quite removed from factiousness. Nowhere are good manners and artistic culture so widespread, reaching even to the lowest. On the other hand, the people are deficient in moral earnestness and courage, which leads to corruption in social life and institutions. It is only when matters have become intolerable that discipline is enforced by the use of Draconian measures. An utter lack of chivalry towards women is an unpleas-ing feature of the national life. Civic courage has also to be developed.' It is remarkable that the professor should deny to the Japanese the possession of both moral and civic courage, but many things have happened in the last decade to vary the estimate in which Europeans hold that people. Slow-moving Europe always prided herself on the progress of her civilisation, and spoke with Pharisaic patronage of the solid Asiatic, the unchanging East, and Oriental lethargy, till she had well nigh persuaded herself that she alone possessed the power of growth. Even after the first capture of Port Arthur, it was fashionable to speak of the Japanese as barbarians possessing a venom of civilisation, an initiative race with just sufficient monkey-like cleverness to produce a veritable imitation of Western science and Western commerce, but incapable of really assimilating these things.

Another accusation was that of instability. The people were said to manifest a love of change for its own sake, and evidence of this was found in the extreme rapidity of the successive steps in national development after the civil wars had overthrown the Shogunate in 1868. These may be catalogued as briefly as possible.

Formosa was invaded in 1874. The army was reorganised in 1883, the navy in 1887. A popular constitution was established in 1889. The victorious war with China followed in 1894, and the abolition of extra-territorial jurisdiction in 1899 accentuated Japanese right to be reckoned a power.
The alliance on equal terms with Great Britain in January of last year accentuated the recognition which Japan had won for herself. She has now silenced those who were ready, a dozen years ago, to say that Japan was going up like a rocket only to fall as ignominiously.
In truth instability has not been a Japanese failing since Tokugawa Iyeyasu seized the government in 1603.
Every Shogun aimed unceasingly at the glory and strength of Dai Nippon.
When it was believed that this could be attained by excluding foreign influence, foreign influence was excluded so rigorously that Japan is the only country in the world where persecution has ever really succeeded in extirpating Christianity. The Shogun Iyem-tsu accomplished this in fourteen years (1634-1638). They for two hundred years Japan was a sealed book to the foreigner till in 1854 the United States extorted a treaty from the last Shogun. The change came with the accession of the Emperor.

Manikito. His object is still the glory of Japan, but in a higher sense, no mere cloistered greatness, but an ascendancy along the entire Pacific coast, and the means the nation is adopting may be summed up in one word—Efficiency. Whichever Japan undertakes she does thoroughly without flinching from consequences, or scurrying work.

For instance, it was believed that with the fall of feudalism hara-kiri had become extinct. Now we know that even the rank and file of the Japanese army are ready to die than to yield. The same utter self-abnegation is not unknown in Europe, but it is rarer. In Tennyson's ballad of The Revenge, he records, as the last order of Sir Richard Grenville,— 'Sink me the ship, Master Gunner, sink her, split her in twain!
Fall into the hands of God, not into the hands of Spain!'
And the gunner said, 'Ay, but the women made reply:
'We have children, we have wives,
And the Lord hath spared our lives.
We will make the Spaniard promise, if we yield, to let us go:
'We shall live to fight again and to strike another blow.'
And the lion there lay dying and they yielded to the foe.

The principle may be a sound one but it is not a Japanese one, and the opposite doctrine, that surrender under any circumstances is a sheer impossibility, may be unchristian or barbarous, or stigmatised by any other question-begging epithet, but it certainly makes for an efficiency unsurpassed in other lands. The most frequently raised accusation against Japanese development is the charge of commercial dishonesty, an allegation that is neither new nor altogether true.
In feudal Japan the Samurai ranked first, then the tillers of the soil, and last of all the trading classes. When Japan became open to foreigners it was invaded by a number of more or less scrupulous merchants, whose disposition was to make haste to be rich, to exploit the ignorance of the Japanese even at the risk of giving that observant people a low opinion of Western commercial probity. With these illustrations before them, the Japanese traders, eager as ever for efficiency, battered the example, and proved that if commerce was to be a game of cheating they could play the game as well as their competitors. But during the last twenty years this idea has faded and to-day many Japanese firms (probably the vast majority) rank high in this respect. The secret of Japanese advance is an open one, and is neither moral nor religious. If either morality or religion appears, it appears in a subordinate position as instrumental to the fulfilment of the real aim, success. They choose their object and they attain that object rigidly, relentlessly and remorselessly. It is well for the community of nations which Japan has now entered, that her aims are high and that this magnificent quality of the Japanese mind is enlisted in the service of freedom and right, and the power that will ultimately possess every one of the marvellous chain archipelagos that festoons the Asian coast from Kamohatka to Borneo united of purpose with an unrivalled power to secure success.

'That is a pretty woman!' exclaimed a prominent member of the legal profession as a lady passed into the ball room. 'She overheard him, and recognising him, remarked, 'And you ought to be a good judge!'

His Excellency the Governor must be acknowledged to be an energetic worker.
After enjoying the hospitality of the Scots until a late hour last night he went out this morning to inspect the handsome Harbour Office and its fleet of launches. His Excellency will no doubt agree that it will be a good thing for many people when the new offices are completed.

Some amusement was caused at the Magistracy this morning by a Chinese boy who was before the Court for a minor offence. His Worship did not want to send the boy to goal and in order to see what he could do with him asked 'Can you pay a fine? How much?' asked the boy. The Court was silent and not doing business like that, inflicted a penalty of $3, with the usual alternative, without further parley.

There is a rumour abroad that the Englishmen in the Colony have decided not to be outdone by the Scotchmen and will give a ball on St. George's Day. The last time a ball was given by the men from south of the Tweed there was, when it was mooted, a section who believed it could not be carried out successfully. It went off well, however, and since it is said there is not likely to be any pessimism exhibited this time any ball which ever takes place will probably go off even better. We hope so.
It is said the same Englishmen are opposed to giving balls because they have no dances like those of their northern friends. But they have some enjoyable dances all the same.

A reader indignantly writes 'as asking if we have taken leave of our senses.
Last night we published an "Intercepted Letter," dated 1893, and a dense friend urges us to note the fact that it is now only 1904. He says in a postscript that he supposes we will blame the printer. The only thing we can put our correspondent's density down to is St. Andrew's Ball. We would advise him to read that letter again to-night.

A Correspondent suggests that the stair carpet for the City Hall is a 'dusty disgrace,' and we think he is not far wrong.
If the City Hall Committee cannot afford any thing more up to date, a few of the Sots will supply the needful. Our Correspondent adds, 'Why not build a new City Hall?' and he gives some good reasons.
But how is it to be done? Trusts and 'old custom' stand in the way.

He was well known in sporting circles at Tientsin as 'Mr. Andrew.' He had been 17 years in China, the last at Tangshan, and went home on 6 months' leave in April last.

The Chinese cruiser Hanyang arrived at Shanghai from Chefoo on No. 26, having on board the crew of the Russian torpedo-boat destroyer Rekoro, which was sunk in Chefoo harbour by her own crew on the 16th instant. Some of the crew were ashore in the afternoon, and though not showing any battle scars, evidently thought it a treat to be alive and well fed.

A Coolie Killed.
A fatal accident occurred in the harbour last night on board the steamer Declaire.
By some means a coolie assisting to unload the ship lost his footing while close to No. 1 hold and fell through the open hatch and fractured his skull, death being almost instantaneous.

The Queen's Birthday.
To-day being the anniversary of Queen Alexandria's birthday the men-of-war and a number of the merchant ships in the harbour were decorated with bunting. The display was a pleasing one and lent the harbour quite a gay appearance. At noon a salute was fired.
